

How do I know if my child has a feeding issue or needs feeding therapy services?

Below is a list of common feeding issues:

- trouble eating, chewing, and swallowing
- poor weight gain
- gagging, choking, coughing with foods
- poor oral motor skills including weak suck, messy bottle feeder, and poor chewing skills
- failure to progress with feeding skills
- difficulty transitioning to new textures
- a selective eater, extreme "picky eater" with refusing to try new foods (limited diet, food selectivity)
- stressful mealtimes including tantrums, sitting at the table for extensive period of time increased food refusal
